

Adopt a Formal COVID-19 Response Plan to Ensure Your Business is Prepared to Resume In-Person Operations During the “Yellow” Phase

As businesses prepare for their respective counties to reopen in accordance with Governor Wolf’s Process to Reopen Pennsylvania, owners should closely review the guidance issued by the Commonwealth concerning the requirements that must be addressed as businesses resume in-person operations during the “Yellow” phase. To effectively comply with such requirements, businesses should adopt a formal COVID-19 Response Plan that outlines how the business will address those requirements, including the designation of a “Pandemic Safety Officer” for the business and the posting of required notices at the place of business.

Rosenn, Jenkins & Greenwald, LLP is prepared to assist businesses in adopting a Response Plan in preparation for resuming in-person operations in the “Yellow” phase. Please contact Paul T. Rushton, Esquire (prushton@rjglaw.com) or Christyan A. Telech, Esquire (ctelech@rjglaw.com) if you are interested in learning more about these services.
