

When your business performs work for a corporation or an LLC, you may extend thousands of dollars of credit to an entity that does not have the ability to pay what will be owed, sometimes relying on the individual owner to do what is right. An experienced business lawyer knows that there are many ways for a service or product provider to obtain greater security from a customer with respect to such payment obligations, such as by requiring a personal guarantee from one or more of the owners of the customer.

For over 65 years, the attorneys in the Business & Finance Department of Rosenn, Jenkins & Greenwald have been helping business owners secure and collect what is owed to them. If you are interested in learning more about these services, contact Lee Piatt (lpatt@rjglaw.com) or one of the other attorneys in our Business & Finance Department at 570-826-5600 or on the web at www.rjglaw.com.
